About Anissa

Anissa Adas focuses her practice on white collar defense, government enforcement and investigations, and complex commercial litigation and appeals. Anissa represents corporate entities in regulatory investigations and compliance matters. She has worked on internal investigations of various types of misconduct for a wide range of corporations. Anissa has also participated in presentations to enforcement and regulatory agencies and appeared in federal court. Anissa maintains a pro bono practice consisting of matters involving immigration and criminal defense.

During law school, she served as a judicial intern for the Honorable Marian Blank Horn of the United States Court of Federal Claims. Prior to law school, Anissa worked for a communications agency in Washington DC, serving clients in the private and public sector, including the Department of Homeland Security and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
